Methodological Approaches to Community-Based Research
Edited by Leonard A. Jason and David S. Glenwick

Methodological Approaches to Community-Based Research offers innovative research tools that are most effective for understanding social problems in general and change in complex person-environment systems at the community level. Methodological pluralism and mixed-methods research are the overarching themes in this groundbreaking edited volume, as contributors explain cutting-edge research methodologies that analyze data in special groupings, over time, or within various contexts. As such, the methodologies presented here are holistic and culturally valid, and support contextually grounded community interventions.

This volume features web appendices that include a variety of research applications (e.g., SPSS, SAS, GIS) and guidelines for the accompanying data sets. The extensive illustrations and case studies in Methodological Approaches will give readers a comprehensive understanding of community-level phenomena and a rich appreciation for the way collaboration across behavioral science disciplines leads to more effective community-based interventions.

A companion website has been created for purchasers of this book at http://pubs.apa.org/books/supp/Jason-Glenwick. Readers will find downloadable data sets for the research applications that pertain to the chapters in Parts II–IV of the volume. 2012. 264 pages. Hardcover.

About the Editors

Leonard A. Jason, PhD, is a professor of psychology at DePaul University, in Chicago, where he heads the Center for Community Research. He has published over 550 articles and 77 book chapters on recovery homes for the prevention of alcohol, tobacco, and drug abuse; preventive school-based interventions; media interventions; chronic fatigue syndrome; and program evaluation. He has been on the editorial boards of seven peer-reviewed psychology journals and has edited or written 23 books. He has served on review committees of the National Institute of Drug Abuse and the National Institute of Mental Health, and has received more than $26 million in federal grants to support his research. He is a former President of APA's Division of Community Psychology and a past Editor of The Community Psychologist. He has received three media awards from APA, and he is frequently asked to comment on policy issues for the media.

David S. Glenwick, PhD, is a professor of psychology at Fordham University, where he also has been the director of the graduate program in clinical psychology and co-coordinator of its specialization in clinical child and family psychology. He has published more than 110 articles and edited four books, primarily in the areas of community and preventive psychology, clinical child psychology and developmental disabilities, and the teaching of psychology. Dr. Glenwick is a former president of the American Association of Correctional Psychology and a former editor of the journal Criminal Justice and Behavior. He is a fellow of seven APA divisions and has been a member of APA's Continuing Education Committee. Dr. Glenwick has been on the editorial boards of four professional journals and is currently also the chair of the New York State Psychological Association's Continuing Education Committee.
